

Plasma is the liquid portion of blood.

About 90% is water, while the remaining 10% contains thousands of essential proteins. The most abundant protein is albumin, which has strong binding, antioxidant and immunomodulatory properties. Immunoglobulins, also known as antibodies, account for 15% of the plasma-protein content.